Program Overview:

The highly ranked PhD program in Higher, Adult, and Lifelong Education (HALE) offers core, elective, research, and methods courses to prepare its graduates to be leading scholars, researchers, and practitioners within the higher education sector, both domestically and internationally. In addition to these courses, a combination of experiences, including seminars, independent studies, and international study abroad opportunities, complement students' learning.

With an innovative curriculum that integrates policy and international scholarship and experiences, the HALE program begins with foundational courses in the following areas: Organization and Administration in Postsecondary Education; Teaching, Learning, and Curriculum in Postsecondary Education; Policy Development and Analysis in Postsecondary Education; and Students in Postsecondary Education. The program provides students the opportunity to pursue a specialized course of study through elective, research, and methods courses, as well as several intellectual hallmarks that include dissertations, where students can pursue research questions of interest.

The HALE PhD Curriculum:

With the assistance of an advisor, doctoral students plan a program of study tailored to meet their educational needs and professional goals. Students in the HALE doctoral program will enroll in a minimum of 45 course credit hours and at least 24 dissertation research credit hours. The curriculum consists of core, elective, and research methodology courses.

Admissions Criteria:

The admissions committee considers the following criteria for recommending admission to the HALE PhD program:

- A graduate GPA of 3.0 or higher (students with a GPA lower than 3.0 may be admitted provisionally)
- References that showcase your academic ability and commitment to the field of higher, adult, or lifelong education
- Official scores from the Graduate Record Examination taken within the last five years
- Personal statement that addresses the following questions:
 1. What experiences led to your interest in pursuing the HALE PhD program?
 2. What qualities, characteristics, and skills do you possess that will make you a strong candidate for the HALE PhD program?
 3. How will the HALE PhD program at Michigan State University help you meet your personal and professional goals?
